

Salary man: having a life-time occupation, instead of working for family or country, they are now work for the company.

1960-1970 is a golden era for Japan, American investment and trade had allowed the Japanese to rebuild and re-industrialize which gave them advantage in trade abroad.

By 1970, Japan normalizes relations with China.

During this period, Japanese phones and automobile industries took dominant. Comparing with American muscle cars, Japanese cars are smaller and more economy so they fit the environment in Japan. During the oil crisis period in 1980s, Japanese cars are popular in USA.

By the 1980s, Japan has a way too fast development. To ensure the dominance of national power, the USA developed a problematic trade deficit with Japan, so Americans began to consider Japan in a negative view, and build a "honey moon" period with China. During that period, Japan is in economic bubble which blew up in 1990s.
